CALL FOR TEACHING ASSISTANT (TA) PROPOSALS

The Institute of Medical Microbiology of the Semmelweis University offers teaching assistant (TA) positions for international students of the Medical Faculty of the Semmelweis University for the 2020/21 academical year with the following terms:

- Successful applicants are supposed to assist at lab (practical) lessons held at the Institute of Medical Microbiology
- Proposals have to be submitted to the Secretariat of the Inst. of Medical Microbiology.
- Submitted proposals will be evaluated by the Dean of the Medical Faculty in cooperation with the Student Government Organization by the beginning of the fall semester, and applicants will be informed on the decision in due course.
- Teaching assistants' tasks and obligations include active participation and assistance in the practical education of students during lab practices (presentation of the theoretical background of the corresponding experiment; technical assistance and supervision of students; critical evaluation and discussion of results).
- Teaching assistants have to submit a detailed summary on their teaching activities to the tutor of the Inst. of Medical Microbiology by the end of the spring semester. This is prerequisite for the official acknowledgement of the teaching assistant's activity as an elective course.

- The duration of the TA position covers both semesters of the 2020/21. academical year. The minimal working time corresponds to the duration of lab lessons of the selected course.
- Successful applicants will receive a scholarship the amount of which is currently under negotiation.
- An essential prerequisite for getting the TA position is that the arithmetical average of the marks received in the previous two semesters is at least 4.00, and the applicant passed his Medical Microbiology final exams with the best mark.
